Several weeks ago, more than a dozen students from Judson University in Elgin visited Ottawa City Hall to discuss the future of downtown Ottawa. The students – who are working towards Masters Degrees in Architecture – sought the opinions of Ottawa citizens and City of Ottawa officials about how the downtown Ottawa of the future should look.

On the evening of Monday, November 30 from 5:30 – 7:30 PM in the Ottawa City Council Chambers, the Judson University students are returning to publically display the urban designs they have created for downtown Ottawa.

The public is invited to view how these students have put to work their considerable creative talents along with their recently gained knowledge of Ottawa to develop new visions of the downtown Ottawa of the future.
